WILL GET OUT VOTES

Republicans Work to Cast Full Register.

VOTERS MUST BE AT POLLS EARLY

Young Men Plan to Use Their Time in Urging Elders to Ballot.

Republicans are perfecting their organization for the purpose of seeing that every vote is cast by the members of the party. Wednesday is steamer day and the fact that there may be mail by the transport that day before promises to keep every business man at his desk until late. The Fourth District committee has issued a call for every Republican to vote early, so that there may be no failure to vote before the close of the polls.

In this work the Young Men's Republican Club is expected to have a large share. The young men are preparing to give part of the day to the party service. Their plan is to so divide the city that every man, who might forget to cast his vote through business demands upon his time, shall be waited upon and solicited to vote, and conveyed to the polls and back to his office in the very shortest possible time. The men who will take up this branch of the work expect to be able to secure many scores of votes for Harris by this means. They have carriages at their disposal and will strive to have the business men leave their desks for the polls early in the day so that they will not be in danger of being beaten out by the chance to vote later.

The meeting of the Republican committee yesterday morning was large and there was an amount of enthusiasm in evidence. The committee on meetings reported that there would be three meetings this evening, at Pauoa, Manoa and Kewalo, where there will be some rivalry, both parties having meetings advertised for the first and last places. The men who have spoken before will appear at these meetings, though the definite assignments have to be made.

The Home Rulers held a short meeting yesterday, but did little owing to the fact that there is a large number of meetings advertised for this evening, the places and speakers having been given out Saturday morning. The Democrats held an hour's session and discussed what they are to do in the fight. The meeting was only fairly attended. The members canvassed the speakers they could send out on the stump to aid in the fight. There was not a sufficiently full meeting to justify the making of a list, and this was put off until the meeting of the committee today at which there will be a complete list of speakers made up and sent to the Home Rulers.

Candidate Dreier, like Cincinnatus, will be called from home to public life if he is summoned, for both parties have signified that he does not need to make any fight, that they will make it for him.

There has been published an address which gives his assent to the platform, which declares for the Republican National Administration and reflects upon the Governor. Mr. Dreier said last night that he had neither written nor signed any such declaration. He said probably some of his friends who knew of the sentiments he had expressed during the past week had written the address, which appealed to him as a good one.

REPUBLICANS SPEAK FOR HARRIS.

The greatest meeting of the campaign was that held Saturday evening at Emma Square. There were several hundred people in attendance despite the counter attraction of a theatrical performance, and right well were they entertained. There was a variation in that Coelho with his Pan-American Exposition Quintette sang a number of songs, and received much applause. The meeting was called to order by Charles B. Wilson of the committee. Coelho interpreted the remarks. S. Ka-ne was the first speaker. Mr. Ka-ne said that it was the duty of the voters to fill the vacant seat with a Republican as it had been filled before. He referred to what had been accomplished by the representatives of the people, who had prayed for certain privileges and rights in the Organic Act, and got them. He said that all these good things, the local government, the free fishing rights and complete franchise were due to the work of Republicans, while the Home Rulers sat back and jeered at the Hawaiians who worked for the good of the country.

W. H. Hoogs said he was there to plead with the voters to elect a Republican to the vacancy. He declared the Republicans were always ready to unite with the Home Rulers to pass good laws, but the latter would not do anything. Representative Aylett said that the Home Rulers had put up a candidate who did not do his duty as a citizen in registering and consequently could not be depended upon to do greater duties for the people.

When Candidate Harris appeared

there was much applause. He said in part:

"Every citizen of this Territory knows that to make this country happy and prosperous we must have good government and just legislation. The Republican platform is the platform of a party which believes in and stands for good government, and everybody should vote the Republican ticket."

"The Home Rule party could have passed the loan bill at the last session of the Legislature if they had really wanted to. But it failed to do so. What is the result? Everybody is suffering the consequences today, especially the working man. The Home Rulers have failed to keep faith."

J. M. Sims said he had been a Democrat and had come out against Dreier because the latter employed Japanese and other alien labor.

Lorrin Andrews said that the Home Rule party had broken faith with the voters and could not be trusted to do anything else in the future. He continued:

"The Home Rule party calls itself the Home Rule 'Republican' party, and it co-operates with the Democratic party. Is that sincere? If they pretend to lean toward the Republican party, why don't they join forces with the Republican party, instead of calling themselves Republicans while they join forces with the Democrats? Then again, can we believe the Home Rulers now, after they have proved themselves insincere after the last election?"

The meeting was closed by Representative Jonah Kumulae, who spoke pointedly of the duty of the people to themselves, which could be best served by a vote for Harris.

HOME RULERS GATHER.

The Home Rulers opened their campaign at the Fish Market Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, choosing that time because the market generally has a large number of shoppers at that hour. Kaula started the campaign with his old cry of "Kill the snakes," and speeches were made by Palua, Kaula, John Wise, Puiki, Poepeo and others.

Dreier formed the principal topic of all the speeches. Palua wanted the people to vote for Dreier, but naively said: "Don't ask who Dreier is or what his principles are. It is entirely unnecessary. He is a candidate of the Home Rule party on the Home Rule platform. That is all that is necessary. Don't let yourselves be inveigled by the devil when you go to the polls on the ninth."

Kaula thought with Dreier in the Legislature the Hawaiians could all live without work. He said: "It was the Republicans who defeated my bill which provided for the licensing of gambling. What was the result? They have thereby deprived many a man of his livelihood and ruined many of the natives. Before this a native man could go down with 25 cents or so and after gambling for a little while he could come here to the Fish Market and buy lots of good things. The Republican party and Dole, as the head of the party, are responsible for that." John Wise spoke as a man who had shaken the hand of Roosevelt. He said: "Republicans are trying to take away from you your rights. Their work is that of a snake. I tell you the day is coming when we will dictate to those Republicans what we want done because we are going to win out in the end."

Puiki wanted the Hawaiians to stand firm against possible bribery on the part of the Republicans, and Poepeo said: "I am not a Home Ruler, and not a Republican, nor a Democrat." He failed to specify what his political leanings were and no one was inquisitive. He asked the people to vote for Dreier because he represented the sugar planters. The Home Rulers have six or seven meetings scheduled for this evening.
